Daphne Selfe Daphne, also known as Daphne Selfe in the United States and by the courtesy title of Lady of the Lamp in the United Kingdom, was a model who became famous for her looks. She was considered among the best-looking models of her generation, and was on the cover of American Vogue over a dozen times, she was regarded as a cultural icon of the mid-20th century, and she is widely regarded as one of the most famous models. Early life Selfe was born on January 9, 1919 in Lawrence, Massachusetts. Her father was an officer in the US Navy, and her mother was a schoolteacher. She studied at the Miss Porter's School and the Miss Porter's School for Girls in Farmington, Connecticut, and then graduated from Vassar College and Reed College in 1938. She also studied opera for a while, and did much typing, although Selfe had begun her career on the runway in order to make a living. She made her first appearance on the New York fashion scene in the fall of 1946, when she posed on the steps of the Ford Building for the windows of American Vogue. Career Selfe signed with the Ford Modeling Agency in 1947, and posed on the runway, modeling leather coats and fur coats, and working on an early version of the celebrity supermodel game. She earned $3,500 in her first year, but she was only paid $100 a week. She was also increasing the payments to her agent, but he could not keep up. In April 1948, she began shooting portraits for publications, including Life, Women's Wear Daily, Collier's, and Holiday. These portraits were of Selfe: her face superimposed on the background of a luxury cruise ship, a glittering gown and a fur coat. In 1952, Selfe was chosen by photographer Richard Avedon as a cover model for the December issue of Vogue. At that time she was one of the few models who could compete with the budding model Bettie Page. In addition, in 1953, Selfe was voted by women in a national poll as America's Most Beautiful Woman. In the early 1950s, Selfe began working in films and television. In 1957, she was offered the role of Julie Greer in John Frankenheimer's psychological thriller The Girl Hunt, but the director decided that Selfe was too tall. Instead, he paired her with Robert Mitchum, and she became
